Burning of Wheeling Iron Works.

Another calamity, quite serious in its character and magnitude, overtook this city yesterday. The extensive rolling and nail mill at the upper end of the city, the Wheeling Iron Works, was destroyed by fire and is almost a total loss. Five thousand kegs of nails were burned with the works. The establishment was worth about $300,000, on which there was a mortgage of $100,000 to secure a loan. There was an insurance of $70,000, which will go to the holders of the loan, so that the stockholders will suffer a total loss of their interest, except what may be represented by the ground connected with the works and the damaged machinery, which, we suppose, will have some value. The nails were fully insured.

About three hundred persons will be thrown out of employment by this calamity. This is a deprivation that will be severely felt in the upper part of the city. The loss of such an establishment is a real misfortune to the community. It is not only a heavy loss to the owners and insurance companies, but a severe deprivation to the workmen and a permanent injury to the business of the city. These three hundred workmen must look for employment somewhere else. We trust they may not be obliged to go to other cities to find it.

The Wheeling Iron Works Company had been recently reorganized and had, as it were, taken a new lease of life. The new company had just got its affairs into satisfactory shape and everything in smooth working order; they had closed a successful year, and had every prospect for a prosperous future, when the blow fell. We trust the energetic gentlemen composing the company may find themselves in a condition to rebuild and resume operations without any great delay.

THE BATTLE OF CASTLEMAN'S RUN.

A correspondent at West Liberty furnishes a graphic report of the sanguinary engagements that transpired during the recent camp meeting at Castleman's Run. From all accounts there was nearly as much fighting up there as there was in the "Wilderness" in the spring of 1865. "Kykyle" tells the story of the three day's battle with a verisimilitude almost equal to the famous "Battle of Dorking."

The plasters of New York intend to strike to-day for the purpose of enforcing the eight-hour law. They had better apply for a job to Tammany. If they can get work for a couple of days they need never care anything about hours of labor again.

A MONUMENT of white marble, twenty feet high, with appropriate inscriptions, erected at Charlestown, Jefferson county, to the memory of the Confederate dead buried in that county, was unveiled last Wednesday, with Masonic and other ceremonies.

A MONUMENT erected by Rhode Island to the memory of her soldiers and seamen who fell in the war with the rebellion, is to be dedicated on the 10th, which day, by proclamation of the Governor, has been made a public holiday throughout the State.

The Wheeling Intelligencer says that McKenna Buchanan is about the sole surviving representative of his peculiar school of acting. Any one who has ever seen Buchanan act need not wish him any bad luck in expressing pleasure at the announcement of the INTELLIGENCER.

ARKANSAS.

LITTLE ROCK, September 2. Advice from Little Rock indicates that a large number of Kansans have crossed the line into the Cherokee nation and squatted on lands for two miles each, in the time of the first settlement of Kansas. These are said to be about two hundred of these squatters. Their presence is said to incite the Indians to violence. The M. & T. Railroad is completed within five miles of Fort Gibson. Reliable accounts state that the worm has appeared on the Red river and has already done the crops considerable damage. The crop prospects are not so good as three weeks ago.

Attempted Suicide and Murder on a Railway Train.

LOUISVILLE, September 2. A letter from a sleeping-car conductor of the Mississippi Central railroad, relative to a suicide and attempted murder said to have happened on his car on Monday night, gives the following account of the incident. The occurrence took place in the ladies' car of the train at Jackson, Tenn. A passenger left his wife alone and went into the saloon. Just after starting from the station the man came out of the saloon and returned to his wife, who was asleep in the seat, and took hold of her. She rose up and immediately commenced shouting murder. The man had cut her throat and had the razor in his hand. The sleeping-car conductor heard the cries of the woman and ran into the car when the man dropped the razor and told him that he had killed himself. The train conductor was notified and the pair were left off at Jackson, Tenn. The woman did not prove fatal and the man is recovering. No name is given and no reason is known for the act.

THE CONFLICT OF THE REPUBLICAN COMMITTEES—CARD FROM AN ENEMY.

Honore Greeley this morning publishes a reply to the late communication of the Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, A. B. Cornell, in which he asserts that the action of the State Central Committee in directing the reorganization of the party in this city, was an unwarrantable interference with the local organization, and was founded in a desire to advance the interests of a desired office holder, rather than the interests of the Republican party. The conduct of the Central Committee, has not tended to secure any adjustment of the local differences which should properly be determined by the State Convention. The change of Mr. Cornell's position, and the fact that he is now a member of the State Central Committee, has not tended to secure any adjustment of the local differences which should properly be determined by the State Convention. FRANCE.

Why the Assembly Prolonged Thiers' Term.

VERMILLES, September 2. The acceptance of Thiers' presidency by the Assembly is not because the Assembly were content with Thiers on his own terms, or afraid of his resignation, but because they could get no one else to take his place. Due D'Aumale's final refusal determined the Right to vote for the bill. McMahon, Changarnier and President Grevy were asked, but all refused. Grevy declared himself more of a Republican than Thiers, and the others said they were unwilling to become a pretext for disorders.

A court martial having been deliberating with closed doors since 6 o'clock this morning has just pronounced the following sentence of the members of the Commune brought before it and tried: Ferre and Seillier are condemned to suffer death; Urion and Tringet imprisonment for life at hard labor; Assy, Billard, Champy, Regere, Granel, Vendure and Ferrat confinement in the fortress; Jourde Rastant simple deportation. Judicial Arrangement of Official Corruption.

NEW ORLEANS, September 2. Judge Abel, of the First District Court, calls the attention of the Grand Jury to the action of State Treasurer Dubuque in refusing to pay the original creditors of the State, and compelling them to sell their claims to his friends. Judge Abel says: "The State Treasury once the pride of the State and the financial artery of its creditors, has been literally turned over to tax-gatherers, brokers, shavers and hangers-on. I have presided long in this Court, and have some idea of the deceptions and plunder of burglars, thieves, etc., and am satisfied that the officials of the State have in two years robbed the State of more than all the thieves, for the last quarter of a century. Fraud, speculation, oppression, extortion and black mailing is resorted to in a most unscrupulous manner. The millions raised by the 2 per cent. tax, and the vast amount of licenses will be absorbed, at least one-half of it, being consumed by corrupt officials and mercenary brokers, and those officials and economists, who manage out of a salary of less than ten thousand dollars to save a quarter million." He regards the laws as inadequate with the present jury system to check or punish these officials. Life advises the wise men of the State to counsel together for its redemption and in conclusion he says: "The darkest page in the history of the State is now being made up in darkness, which I repeat when deciphered will show present bankruptcy and perhaps future repudiation. The great crime of the State is the destruction of the future of the State by the present. The State is too strong for the imperfect laws upon the subject; too corrupt to fear a jury. One-half of whom can neither read nor write, but they may yet meet the frowns and indignation of an injured people and be forced to enjoy their ill gotten gains beyond their guilt."

NEW YORK POLITICS.

Letter from a Man who Wants to be Re-elected.

THOR, N. Y., September 2.

A letter from Roscoe Conkling to J. H. Griswold is published to-day, in which the Senator says that the Republicans of the State are not divided upon any principle at stake now, or upon any practical measures, and asks if the Republicans will desert their cause merely because the leaves have not come to their baskets or the fishes to their nets. A few years ago it was an odious imputation to charge that politics depended upon the spoils, and it cannot be possible now that men will plot against the cause because the offices are too few to go around. The Senator adds: "For my part there is no Republican whom I can't take cordially by the hand and labor with him shoulder to shoulder in the work before us. I am for General Grant. This would be my position even without any strong regard for him and confidence in him personally. He has made a better President than you and I, when we voted for him, had any right to expect, and he is a better President every day than he was the day before. He has given us the best practical administration in many respects, we have had for a quarter of a century, and the people know it. With Gen. Grant as our candidate our success is assured. With any other candidate success is not certain, and hence the renomination and re-election of Gen. Grant seems to me a foregone conclusion. In the State of New York, more than anywhere else, the path of Republicans appears plain and their duty urgent. Here is the greatest free State in Christendom given over to rascals, a prey to a horde of thieves, who, in instigating our chief citizens, are a disgrace to humanity, and a mildew upon the Commonwealth by their pestilential profligacy. Those plunderers have seized upon the State Government, the Legislature, and all the municipal agencies of the city of New York, and heretofore they have tampered with our party organizations, and also debauching and controlling them. The question facing us is, whether this degrading, flagitious way shall cease or be perpetuated and fortified anew. Every one knows that the fittest way to stop a rot is to remove it. We must elect the best man in the Republican party and elect him to the Legislature and to the executive offices of the State. And yet men stand talking about Federal patronage, and differences among leaders, and personal feelings between individuals and the like. What have such things to do with the duty of the citizen? What people care about them? What should they care for? Of what public concern are personal aims and objects, and the mischances of individuals? For one, I can know how, by act or commission, I have given just offense to any man, I ought to go, and will go, and make amends to him, but I insist that all who are in earnest should go to work, and keep at it. It is a high time to be done with the unprofitable things signifying nothing, and productive only of harm. The best way to do a thing is to do it. Talking about it, but talking about it, and many are willing to do, and what might be done, when there is but one straightforward thing to do, is not near so likely to help the Republican party as to take right hold honestly and squarely as men who believe in what they are about, and mean it. We shall be all together in recommending the best man, and every man will help who never helped us before."

AN IMPORTANT REFORM MOVEMENT.

NEW YORK, September 2.

The New York City Council of Political Reform is procuring the enrollment of all right minded citizens for the purpose of correcting public abuses, securing the competent and righteous administration of the city of New York, and to put in nomination for office only intelligent and incorruptible citizens. The movement originated with this class, and its management has been prudently chosen from it. Funds are solicited for carrying on the work, and contributions can be sent to the Treasurer, Henry Clews, 93 Wall street. Among the Executive Committee are W. P. Havemeyer, Robert Ho, George B. Putnam, Dexter A. Hawkins and Hooper C. Vanvort.

JUBAL EARLY'S SPEECH IN THE VIRGINIA CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.

The following is the speech of General Early, delivered to serve out the committee resolutions of the Virginia Conservative Convention.

"Mr. Chairman—I am a man of peculiar notions and do not feel like suppressing all my thoughts. When I came to this Convention I thought it was to be a meeting of white Virginians—gentlemen—called together to discuss the body, and suits between the two parties. Those which formerly divided the Whigs and Democrats are dead, but there are living issues for discussion which ought not to be suppressed. My old friends who have been pointing to Mr. Smith and myself may not agree upon fighting our common enemy, but I see a determination to suppress freedom and to deprive myself and others of the liberty to discuss questions which should be discussed.
